Asset Protection Trusts for Children or Grandchildren can protect a beneficiary's inheritance from Divorce. Asset Protection planning should be a major consideration in almost every Estate Plan. Most unsophisticated attorneys will terminate trusts for Children or Grandchildren at or about age 35. With most divorces occurring after that age, why limit the opportunity to protect a child's inheritance? An Estate Plan which takes into account both transfer tax avoidance and Asset Protection is typically drafted by an attorney who limits his or her practice to Estate Planning – not a general practice attorney.
